Using The Census Without Losing Your Senses

Learn to how make census research work for you by following a New York family from 1940 back to 1790. Our focus will be on the federal census, particularly pre-1850 census records, the New York state census, and special census schedules like agriculture and mortality.

About Our Speaker: Amanda E. Perrine

Amanda started researching her family history as a pre-teen. She received her Master's in Library Science and a Certificate of Advanced Study in Cultural Heritage Preservation from Syracuse University. She is currently the director of Maxwell Memorial Library where she leads monthly genealogy roundtables. When not at work on her genealogy she can be found with her husband and son exploring Central and Western New York.
